MAINE SUPERHIGHWAY TO DETERMINE COURSE OF U.S. HIGHWAY BUILDING

The success or failure of the Kittery to Portland toll highway will determine the future of America's highway building programs for many years to come, Henry D. Pringle, noted feature writer, indicates in an article in this week's issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

Entitled "No Relief For Motorists," Mr. Pringle's article reviews the case for and against toll superhighways, stressing the obvious impossibility of building such roads at today's costs with general tax funds. He cites the experience of the Pennsylvania Turnpike and Merritt Parkway and the national controversy during the past ten years between the advocates of toll and free highways.

What happens to the Kittery to Portland Turnpike, due to be opened late next Fall, will have a profound effect on the decisions of America's highway planners in the years to come, Mr. Pringle emphasizes. He points out that the highway problems of Maine are comparable to those of many other rural states.

America needs 40,000 miles of high speed, modern highways, the article reveals, and delay in building them will result in a continued high fatality and accident record on the antiquated roads of the present, as well as millions of dollars lost to business. The unprecedented trend toward travel will aggravate the problem until major policy decisions are reached, the author believes.

FARR-MCALISTER

Miss Barbara Eloise McAllister of Norway and Raymond Rudolph Farr Jr of West Paris were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at the home of Rev. Eleanor Blacknell Forbes, pastor of the Universalist church. The double ring service was used. They were attended by Dr. Edward O. Ring and Miss Priscilla McAllister.

Mr. Farr is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald L. Young of Elm St. Bethel, is serving aboard the amphibious force flagship, USS Taconic, flagship of the Atlantic Fleet Amphibious Exercises being conducted in the Caribbean Sea.

The exercises, under the command of Rear Admiral Ralph O. Davis, USN, Commander Amphibious Forces, Atlantic Fleet, involve the landing of 5,000 Marines on a United States owned island and are designed to train Naval personnel in all phases of amphibious work.

MAPLE SYRUP MIRACLE

The collectors of maple sap report to us that their work has suffered a serious stoppage, due to the recent cold snap. This is sad news and we trust that the flow of this precious fluid has not ceased altogether.

Our hope that the sap will continue to run in part selfish. We do not share in this noble work, except at the end of the production line. We like to see the variety of cans that hang from the maple trees, because they conjure up memories of hot biscuits and maple syrup. And if we are lucky enough to have a generous friend, perhaps we may even transform this memory into a tasty reality. A New Englander can hardly deny that hot crusty biscuits smothered in butter and drowned in maple syrup are THE delicacy of the spring season. This is what sap time means to us.

But to other folk, it means a great deal more. Those who collect the colorless, watery sap and then carefully nurse it over a hot stove until it is transformed into the sweet golden syrup are participants in a miracle. These collectors of New England's first harvest of the year should be greatly admired. It is a faith that stirs them, after the long cold winter, to drill holes in ancient maple trees, hang out their nutty array of cans and wait for the sap to run. No less a faith is demonstrated as they watch the sap simmer and boil, until it reaches just the right point when it is good syrup. These folks have a kinship with the soil and growing things. They know the thrill of gathering the first fruit of the land. And they are willing to labor to produce a sweet miracle.

In a changing world this is a good thing. How hopeful it is that amid the rise and fall of nations, the despots and fear of our world this spring, there are still those who take account of the sap flowing in the trees. Those who know just when to take a sweet golden miracle from a hot transforming fire.

Those attending a dinner party at the Gateway Hotel Tuesday evening were: Mrs. Erma Young, Mrs. Temi Thurston, Mrs. Stella Allen, Mrs. Helen Palmer, Miss Eva Bean, Doris Sylvester, Miss Marjorie Merrill, Miss Bea Brown, Mrs. F. L. Edwards, Miss Fern Jordan, Miss Ida Packard, Mrs. Leona Flint, Mrs. Eleanor Bean, Mrs. Harlan Hutchins, Mrs. Josephine Whitman, Mrs. Barbara Brown, Miss Jilla Brown, Mrs. O. A. Pratt, and Mrs. Norma Jodrey.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wheeler entertained Saturday evening in honor of Mrs. Fred Wheeler's birthday.

Betty Ann Butler and Barbara Cole spent a few days in Portland last week with Betty Ann's grand mother.

Mr. and Mrs. John Reserve have moved to their farm at Hunt's Corner, after spending the winter in town.

BOY SCOUTS TO COLLECT SCRAP PAPER

The annual scrap paper collection will be made by Troop 165 from April 12th to April 18th. The proceeds will be used to buy sleeping bags for out-door camping.

It will be helpful if the paper is prepared for collection as follows:

1. Please make separate packages of newspapers and staples of magazines.

2. Please tie the packages securely in bundles approximately 12 inches high.

PROSPECTIVE POTATO PLANTINGS 12 PERCENT BELOW 1946

The 1947 acreage of potatoes in the United States will be the smallest planted since 1884 if farmers intentions as of March 1 materialize. Farmers throughout the country are planning reduced potato acreages and March 1 reports indicate prospective plantings of only 2,309,700 acres. In 1946 growers planted 2,624,700 acres of potatoes, considerably less than the 1936-45 average of 2,945,200 acres. In comparison with 1946, plantings in all States except Indiana and South Carolina are expected to be less.

New Doctrine To Realign World

Truman Draws Battle-Lines Against Red Expansionism

By BAUKHAGE

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N. W.,
Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — When Harry Truman enunciated what the Wall Street Journal, a periodical not given to poetic ille-mintuousness, called "Democracy's Monroe Doctrine," he probably didn't realize the multifarious effects thereof.

At this writing neither congress nor the country has quite recovered from the impact of those words read with the matter-of-fact, undramatic, unoratorical, cracker-barrel diction of a matter-of-fact, undramatic, unoratorical, cracker-barrel man. When I heard the President read them, standing there, calm and confident, at the lectern of the reading clerk on the house rostrum, looking up from the text only occasionally with that bird-like tilt of his head, as the television cameras purred gently from the opposite gallery, I felt a little worried. The cabinet members seated in the well, the senators in the first rows of seats, the house members crowded into rows behind them—all seemed almost glum. I didn't realize the solemnity of the message which held them in a restrained silence. Only thrice was there applause after he began to speak. Before and after there was plenty and it was evenly balanced. It was bi-partisan, not weighted heavily on the side of the administration party as it usually is when a President speaks.

When the speech was over it was the same. The senators left in silence; there was little or no comment. As Senator Lodge said when a radio man plucked at his sleeve and asked if he would submit to an interview: "I can't think THAT fast!" Even the fast and sound thinkers wanted time to think leisurely and deeply.

In other words, cabinets and cabinet makers, premiers and pro-consultants will no longer dance to the Kremlin's tune if they expect Uncle Sam to pay the piper—or the butcher or the baker.

Commies Aim at Revolution

Recently when Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach urged that the Communist party in America be banned by law it brought forth an emphatic protest from the secretary-general of the party, Eugene Dennis.

What are the Communists after? The new Kiplinger magazine, published in Washington, says in its March issue:

"As spelled out in their own words, American Communists have three major aims in the United States: The revolutionary overthrow of capitalism and the capitalist state, a Soviet form of government under a dictatorship of the proletariat, and finally, the Communist heaven-on-earth, a collectivist economy leading to a classless society."

"Of the three aims, their first is revolution. Not merely change, but full-fledged revolution, planned, led and controlled by the disciplined Communist minority. The liberation of the working class from the yoke of capitalism cannot be effected by slow changes, by reforms, but only by revolution."

(Editor Kiplinger says if you want chapter and verse for his authority for the above statement, write to him at 1729 G Street, N. W., Washington 6, D. C., and he will send them to you.)

It is not likely, however, that the party will be banned by law. Not because congress loves the Communists. But even that ardently anti-red group, the committee on un-American activities, doesn't approve of wiping out the party. An anonymous member of the committee recently pointed out that if the party was broken up, it would simply go underground, where its devious ways would be harder to follow.

A worm on the surface is worth two dozen underneath the soil, as any early FBI bird will testify.

Life Insurance

Increases in U. S.

On the average, there were over 4 life insurance policies per family in the United States at the end of 1945. It is revealed in a survey by life insurance companies. In amount of life insurance owned, the average per family was $1,000 at mid-year 1945. The average 1945 protection per family was more than 20 per cent larger than that of 1940 and was 2 1/2 times the 1920 protection average. The 1945 average per family of life insurance owned was nearly equal to the 1945 average income per family, the average per family of national income in 1945 being $1,360. In 1920, the average protection per family was nearly 50 per cent below the average of national income per family. This gap was narrowed in the ensuing years, until in

Since that day thousands of words have been spoken and printed in thousands of cities all over the world, about that message which covers a little more than four and a half pages, typewritten on both sides of the sheet since wartime economy still is practiced at the White House. In many odd corners of the bazaars and market places those words crackled like tiny electric sparks.

And everywhere thoughtful, intelligent people in foreign countries—those who had always looked upon America as a nation whose political and cultural outlook was most sympathetic to their political and cultural outlook, but whose economic theories pointed further to the right than their own socialist leanings—pondered. These were people to whom Soviet Russia was primitive, harsh, cruel in its methods. Nevertheless, Russia's economic theories differed less from their own than did the economic theories of the United States, whose civilized, friendly and humane characteristics attracted them. They found that they must choose. They must say to Russia or America: "Whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people; and thy ways shall be mine."

Perhaps never before in history had a great nation so certainly divided the sheep from the goats, the friends from the enemies. The President's plan is more than a moral question. It involves more than abstract principles of political economy or social philosophy. It sets forth with shuddering simplicity to the wavering nations of the world the warning that they must run with the hare or ride with the hounds; they must have no other political god before Demos—the spirit of the people. Either majority rules in your house or your house is ruled out of bounds.

Vanishing Crane

WHOOPING CRANE

This illustration of a Whooping Crane was supposed to accompany some remarks on that fast-disappearing species of American bird life that appeared in this column recently. Unfortunately the picture, like most of the originals, went astray. Since that article appeared, two national magazines published stories about this magnificent bird, whose whooping is becoming fainter and fainter every day. One article estimated that only a hundred specimens were still alive and whooping. The other article placed the number at 29. Says the Fish and Wildlife Service of the department of the interior, which is conducting a survey of these, the tallest (man-sized) and most beautiful of American birds: "fewer than 40" have been counted. They are in the coast region of southern Louisiana and Texas.

HIGHEST ON RECORD

Livestock Value Soars to Peak

WASHINGTON. — Although the number of livestock on farms declined during 1946, the farm inventory value of all livestock soared to $11,252,000, a gain of 25 per cent over the previous year and the highest total on record, according to a bureau of agricultural economics report. The drop in livestock numbers was the third successive decline since a high was reached January 1, 1946.

The report listed $1,500,000 head of cattle, 26,100,000 milk cows, 56,901,000 hogs, 472,442,000 chickens, and 36,671,000 stock sheep as of the first of this year. In addition, there were 7,251,000 horses, 2,773,000 mules and 6,032,000 turkeys.

The value per head of cattle, hogs, sheep, chickens and turkeys at the beginning of 1947 reached new heights. The value per head of horses and mules was somewhat above a year earlier.

Supplies of feed grains on farms on January 1 were 10 per cent larger than on the same date a year earlier. With the exception of 1942, they were the largest January stocks on record.

With livestock numbers down, the supply of feed grains in relation to livestock was more favorable than a year ago. The supply per unit of livestock reached record levels, 17 per cent larger than at the beginning of 1946, and 8 per cent above January 1, 1942, the previous high.

MRS KILBORN WRITES OF LIFE IN MEXICO

It is a far cry even by air from Bethel, Maine, to Guaymas, State of Sonora, Mexico. Incidentally Guaymas is pronounced Hymas. This waterway on the Pacific Ocean almost forms an inland sea and the port of Guaymas, a deep Harbor well protected from violent tides, yet on the Gulf of California, provides a fishing ground unequalled. The shore-line of the peninsula of lower California can be dimly seen, ninety-five miles from the bay of Guaymas. This bay was formerly, up to the time of when Mexico backed us, in declaring war against Japan, a favorite fishing ground of the Japanese, who were then deported.

The scenery of this region is unsurpassed in beauty. The placid blue water is framed with weird, often fantastic shaped mountains composed entirely of volcanic rock; in the background is the desert in which the tallest tree-forms are the Saguaro cactus some of which are said to be 150 to 200 years old. The mountains are but sparsely dotted near their bases with chapparal.

The bird life both on water and on land is an attractive feature. Walking or sitting by the shore of the bay one frequently sees schools of good sized fish close in shore. Thousands of small fry jump from the water playfully, their bodies often glisten in the sunshine like silver. Often dolphins disport themselves near enough to provide mild excitement.

"Allah does not deduct from the allotted time of man those hours spent in fishing." It was the good fortune of the writer to be included in an all-day fishing excursion with a party in one of the large motor launches. The ever-changing rock formation of the shore is fascinating, provoking speculation as to the manner of these prehistoric deposits of lava and sand, and sealing in retrospective imagination this coast, as well as that of California proper, a chain of flaming volcanoes. The cliffs all along the shore fall sheer into deep water. So the launch was at times

Profits Fallacy

The profit incentive is widely misunderstood and maligned. Many folks talk about profits as though they were injurious. These folks indulge in side-glances, as if profits were a vicious imposition upon the people. Profits, to some who are misled or misinformed, have assumed a negative sound. The fallacy is that industry arrives at selling prices by piling onto production costs as much profit as the traffic will bear. This is not the way profits are calculated.

Sales prices on the tags are the prime consideration. In a free competitive market, the price tag is not marked according to preconceived notions of what the profit ought to be. Another fallacy, that free enterprise makes goods for profit rather than for use, comes to light here. The consumer is king in a free market; the price tag is slave to the demands of a price-conscious buying public. This is one game in which the consumer takes the sweepstakes.

Efficiency Is King

You and I manufacture radios. We meet squarely in the market, where mine is priced at $100 and yours at $75. If the quality is the same, I must either lower my selling price to compete or give to the customer one-third greater value than you do. The lower the price and the more quality included, the better off each of us will be—otherwise. And the first one of us to achieve quantity sales, or real mass production, will be the first one to give the customer lower prices and better quality. Competition thus regulates the selling price regardless of my costs.

The cycle is just that simple. To keep factories running, the goal of our industries is to make a better product available to a larger number of people through mass production and lower selling costs. After deducting costs from the customer's price the result may or may not be a profit. When the margin is uncomfortably close, the next logical step will be toward more efficient production.

Efficiency of operation means to industry the ability to keep down costs of making and selling a product. The object is a favorable position on the open market. This means that factories must be busy constantly, taking up the unemployed, supplying products at lower costs to an ever increasing buying public. Not only idle men, but idle money, is called for to provide the tool to increase output.

The Public Profits

Winner of this game is the buying public. Because of the profit incentive and free competition, the public reaps huge dividends in the form of better merchandise at fair prices. To the average citizen of socialist and totalitarian countries, where I have observed that these things are never duplicated, these simple facts seem an unattainable dream. What American would wish to exchange this system for methods that have never succeeded half so well?

Profit is no parasite feeding on our economic system. Profit is the life blood of the industrial and business enterprises responsible for the highest level of civilization the world has known. Freedom to compete, against skill and efficiency by using better skill and more efficiency, means a progressive civilization—not a static economy that either withers away or makes spoilage for the spoilers.

SKILLINGSTON

George McAllister met with a bad accident last Wednesday at the lumber saw. He lost the end of his thumb and first two fingers of his left hand. He was taken to the Community Hospital at Rumford and returned home Friday evening.

Mr and Mrs Steven Tones of Providence, R. I., spent the week end with Mr and Mrs Everett Marshall and family.

Mrs Geneva Johnston who has been with Mr and Mrs Leslie Johnston and family for the past month has returned home.

Alice Wright spent her vacation with her father in Berlin, N. H.

Elmer Stearns and family of Northwood Bethel spent Sunday at Leslie Johnston's.

Mr and Mrs Everett Marshall and son John, are in Portland Friday.

Walter Brown has been confined to his home for the past two weeks with illness.

THE AMERICAN WAY

COMMUNISM

By George Peck

Karl Marx, the originator of Communism, evolved his theory on the basis that under Capitalism the workers are exploited and ground down. At the time Marx published his theory, it was not so foolish for him to believe in it, but today it is stupid for anyone to consider any such theory in view of the demonstrated success of Capitalism under which system workers get such a large share (approximately 30 per cent in America) of what they help to produce.

Communism concentrates all wealth, control of all jobs and the right to free speech into the hands of very few people. This inevitably leads to dictatorship. This is exactly what happened in Russia, the only country in which Communism has been tried on a large scale.

Communism banishes God. Karl Marx wrote that religion is the opiate of the masses. When the Communists take over control of a country, churches and religious organizations are closed. Religion and Communism cannot both "breathe in the same atmosphere."

Communism presupposes that all people are equal, while Capitalism knows this to be a fallacy, but does believe that all people should have equal opportunity. When Stalin became dictator of Russia, his first move was to turn sharply away from Communism. He publicly declared that workers should not share alike but that each should be paid according to his individual ability and productivity. He stated that the worker who worked harder and better than his fellow-workers should have better food, better clothing and a better home in which to live. This was a confession that wealth cannot and should not be distributed equally. Right there, Stalin threw Karl Marx and his Utopian theory of Communism into the ash-can.

Under Communism the people HAVE to be governed by a small group of men. A people willing to submit to this kind of rule are not likely to govern themselves and should not be allowed to do so. The same is true of any collective system.

In America, under Capitalism, the people individually own all the wealth of the country, and our law makers are our elected representatives. Danger threatens this ideal state of economic and political affairs. If we continue to place more and more wealth in the hands of our Federal Government, thus giving it control of more and more jobs, one fine day these lawmakers will cease to be our elected representatives, and instead, become our un-elected and self-appointed rulers.

Communism kills all initiative, all incentive. Why should a worker try to do a better job? If his only reward is to be equal to that of another fellow worker who has less ability and toils less diligently in America, under Capitalism, the skilled and industrial worker gets a greater reward, plus the opportunity to advance to an executive position. As proof of the latter, take a look at the thousands of men now holding key positions who started at the bottom.

Communism is an impractical and unworkable theory and will continue to be just as long as human beings are human. To aspire to better things, the ambition to outstrip one's fellows is but human. It was the fellow with the strongest muscles and who exercised it who became "boss man." But civilization has marched on, until today it is the fellow with the strongest brain and who exercises it who works his way to the top of the heap. There is now an aristocracy of brains which will not stomach Communism. It must either operate under a Capitalistic system, or sit in the saddle of a dictatorship.

The greatest benefit for mankind comes not from placing the control

Uncle Sam Says

All of us are familiar with quizzes about this and that. Let's take this question: What is the strongest, economic family asset in America? Millions of you could win the jackpot prize for the correct answer. U. S. Savings Bonds, of course. Ownership of U. S. Savings Bonds is now part and parcel of our American way of life because Americans know that Savings Bonds help to build a better, surer future. Americans know that they yield a good profit at no risk at all to the principal.

Mrs C. A. Judkins, Correspondent

Mrs Lillian Abbott, R. N., of East Summer, who was caring for her sister, Mrs Roland Bernier, returned home Sunday. Mrs Arthur Bernier of Canton came Sunday to help her daughter-in-law for one week.

The Gould students, Ruth Judkins, Carlie Angevine and Eunice Lane returned to Bethel Monday after one weeks vacation.

School closed in town last Friday for one week vacation.

The Misses Agnes and Helen Angevine and Shirley and Ruby Enman went to Rumford Saturday to visit Mrs. Ban Barnett for a few days.

Kenneth and David Hinckley of Rangeley were in town last Saturday.

Mrs Esther Williamson has gone to Bethel to care for her mother, who is ill.

Mrs Esther Collins is caring for Mrs. Bertha Judkins.

J. M. Fraser has completed his season's work at Mosquito Brook and returned home.

Mr and Mrs. W. E. Hicks are cleaning at Birch Point Camps and will move back there this week.

7:21, which is said to have all the letters except J.

Q.—Is it true that one verse in the Bible has in it all the letters of the alphabet?

A.—The nearest to it is Ezra 7:21, which is said to have all the letters except J.

Q.—How long was Noah's ark according to our modern measurements?

A.—It was 300 x 50 x 30 cubits. (Genesis 6:16.) Allowing twenty-two inches to a cubit, the ark was 547 feet long, 91 feet broad, and 54 feet high, having three decks and two acres of floor space.

Q.—Is man by nature immortal?

A.—Job 4:17: "Shall mortal man be more just than God? Shall a man be more pure than his Maker?" 2 Chronicles 14:11: "O Lord, Thou art our God; let not mortal man [margin] prevail against Thee."

Q.—Where will I find the battle of Armageddon described in the Bible?

A.—The battle of Armageddon is not mentioned in the Bible. In Revelation 16:14 we read of the battle of that great day of God Almighty, and in the sixteenth verse we read: "And he gathered them together into a place called in the Hebrew tongue Armageddon."

Q.—Were the twelve apostles the only disciples?

A.—They were disciples as well as apostles, but there were many more disciples of Jesus. Besides the twelve, He sent forth seventy. (See Luke 10:1.) Immediately after our Lord's ascension the disciples at Jerusalem numbered 120 (Acts 1:15), and He appeared after His resurrection to more than five hundred believers at one time. (1 Corinthians 15:6.)

Q.—Why not get plenty of Bible on Sunday and let that do for the week?

A.—Of the people of Berea, the apostle Paul says: "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so."

Acts 17:11, "If God's Word were studied as it should be," says a modern student, "men would have a breadth of mind, a nobility of character, and a stability of purpose that is rarely seen in these times."

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

Railroad fans, who mix photography with their love of trains, welcome striking shots such as this.

HOBBYISTS' HOBBY

SEVERAL days ago my friend, the Doc, was showing me his collection of negatives—almost 2,000 of them—which he has made in a five-year period.

Many of Doc's negatives are similar. Four out of every five of the shots he's taken are pictures of trains or railroad yards or signal towers or stations. The point is that Doc is a railroad fan first, a camera fan second.

Doc, like a great many other hobbyists, knows that photography can complement almost any other pastime. "Why," he put it the other day, "railroad fans swap pictures all the time; a man in San Antonio sends me a shot of the Texans Bullet, and I send him one of the Broadway Limited."

So whether you build model railroads like Doc, are an avid bird watcher, still chase fire engines, or devote your off hours largely to your garden, try picturing your hobby.

Today's shot, for example, is one that Doc, or any railroad fan, might like. It's good pictorially; it has good composition. It was made, too, with an exposure of 1/60 at f/11—an exposure roughly equivalent to that of a simple box camera. No faster exposure was necessary since the photographer shot head-on as the train slowly rounded a curve after leaving a station and was just gaining speed.

This is just one example, to be sure, of how picture taking fits into other hobbies. If you work with wood, why not try picturing the new table you are making, both in the process of construction and in its finished glory? Or if you're a sports fan—sports pictures are among the most interesting of all shots.

That Nagg Back

May Warn of Disease

Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurried pace has taken its toll on the kidneys. They are especially susceptible to the conglomeration of overworked or strained kidneys. Proved as a housekeeper, the housewife can help to keep the kidney in top condition.

You may suffer nagg kidney disease if you have a kidney stone, swelling, fever, tired, nervous, all worn out, or kidney or bladder disorder, including scaly or urination.

Try Dean's Pills. Dean's Pills help to prevent kidney disease. They are a safe, effective, and inexpensive means of kidney approval.

Practical Instructions For the Home Nurse

HOME NURSING HINTS

Treating Wounds

WHEN Junior's hand is cut open by a rusty nail, better call the doctor right away—there's danger of blood poisoning.

Meanwhile, cleanse the wound thoroughly with soap and water. Then pour in enough peroxide to dig out all those parts of the nail that are still embedded in a hot, strong epsom salt solution. Our booklet No. 81 contains 40 pages of helpful advice about home nursing. Covers nursing of contagious diseases, care during pregnancy, after operations, in case of accident, minor first aid, etc. Send 25 cents (coin) for "Practical Instruction for the Home Nurse" to Weekly Newspaper Service, 243 W. 17th St., New York 11, N. That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—tells down on the kidneys. They are apt to become over-fatigued and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, loss of appetite, swelling—feet constantly full of water. These are symptoms of the kidney. They are apt to become over-fatigued and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

Take Doan's Pills. Don't let the kidney's to pass of harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by physicians everywhere. Ask your druggist!

DOAN'S PILLS

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Topping Miller

Jill McFarlane, whose father, Richard, disappeared in World War I, falls in love with Lieutenant Span Gordon. She is upset when she discovers her brother, Ric, has fallen in love with Sandra Calvert, a divorcee of questionable character. Jill is thrown from her horse and hospitalized. During her absence, Richard visits her mother, Julia. He tells her he assumed the name of Captain Mackey and is stationed at the same camp as Ric. His father, John L., who has aided Julia in raising the children, denounces Richard. Julia is horrified at his callousness and refuses to tell her children the truth. At camp Captain Mackey tells Ric he knew his father in France during the first war.

CHAPTER XIII

He had to take care of her, Ric decided, she mustn't be hurt again. After the war when men had acquired equality again he'd look up Lieutenant Colonel Win Calvert and hand him a good joist in the jaw.

In her own room Sandra Calvert shed her girdle with a relieved sigh. She'd done a stupid thing, letting Ricky see her in a morbid mood. Men don't like too much emotion in women, not unless it was directed at them. And dragging Win in had been the clumsiest move of all. She had so little time. Soon Ricky would be sent off to officer's school, and she hadn't money enough to follow him. Win would be slow with her alimony, of course. He was always slow. It would stop if she married again, of course. But she was not dubious of the future.

She was brushing her hair when the knock sounded on the door. Swiftly she shook the bright curls into a cloud around her face, picked up jacket edged with fluffy white fur, and opened the door. Then she drew back, her face stiff with fury.

"What do you want?" she demanded angrily.

Captain Roger Mackey quirked an eyebrow and smiled at her without mirth.

"Very pretty, Sandy. You were expecting somebody else, I infer?"

"It was not! Go away before I call the house detective."

"I think I won't go away," he answered coolly. "I came to talk to you."

"You're not going to talk to me."

Her face was livid. Her eyes blazed. "Get out of my door, or I'll telephone the office."

"I don't think you'll do that, Sandy. Stop being dramatic and let me pass—and shut that door."

"I don't entertain men in my bedroom, Rod Mackey."

"All right, I'll wait while you put on a coat or something, and we'll talk in the little parlor down the hall."

"And be overheard by a lot of soldiers and their dates? No, thank you. I'm not going to talk to you. We haven't a thing to say to each other. Get out now, will you?"

"If you're seen coming in here I might be put out of the hotel!"

Mackey Pays a Social Call

"I think you're safe. No one saw me come down the hall." He walked in, shut the door firmly, and she backed away from him and put a big chair between them. "Sit down and relax, Sandy. After all, we're old friends."

"You were never a friend of mine, Rod Mackey. I came here to get away from everything that I hated. I was unlucky when they sent you to this post. I don't want to be reminded of anything that happened in the islands. Please go away and leave me alone."

"I'm not going to talk about old times," he said, amiably. "I'm going to talk about now. About you."

She flared at him. "No wonder they broke you! You are the most impossible, offensive person I ever knew."

His eyebrow flickered again, the mocking trace of a smile hovered over his dry mouth. "You don't do that dowager stuff very well, Sandy. Stick to the old army game. Swear if you feel like it. I won't mind. But I'm going to give you a few orders—now!"

"I don't have to take orders from you. I'm not in your command."

"You'll take these orders, Sandy Calvert!" He was grim now, his eyes were blue ice. "I want you to let that boy alone."

Her mouth curled scornfully. "Did they assign you to be a nurse to that squadron out there?"

"Take it easy, Sandy. You show your age when you blare up like that. Very unbecoming, too, I'm not getting out till you promise to send that boy about his business and not to see him again."

"What is this all about, anyway?" she demanded shrilly. "I'll see Ricky McFarlane whenever I like, and you won't stop me!"

He took a cigarette from the pocket of his blouse, lit it elaborately, dropped the match in the wastebasket, looked at her levelly through the smoke.

"I think I can stop you," he said, coolly.

"Try to do it! It's none of your affairs. Get out of here."

"You'll let young McFarlane alone, or he'll be called into my office for an interview," he said, icily.

"I see." She waited a little before she spoke. "Blackmail!"

"No blackmail. Just a brief airing of the truth, and you wouldn't know about truth, would you, Sandy? How old are you now, for instance?"

"I'm old enough to see through your rotten game! But if you think you're going to force me to start seeing you—"

"You flatter yourself, my dear. I was never in your little red book. I was Win's friend. I want nothing from you. Lucky for me, for there's nothing about you that any self-respecting man would want!"

Her features contorted, anger, hate and fear driving all the surface prettiness out of her face. Her skin took on a greenish cast, her eyes darkened and receded, behind a curtain of pure rage.

"Your insults can't hurt me," she said. "I don't expect anything better from you. And I'm not afraid of your threats. But this interest in her features contorted, anger, hate and fear driving all the surface prettiness out of her face. Her skin took on a greenish cast, her eyes darkened and receded, behind a curtain of pure rage.

"All privates hate their officers. It's the American in them, the fierce individualism in this country that makes men fight for equality, or for superiority. It keeps them trying. It's what makes this army one that no goose-stepping mob of regimented slaves can lick. Ric McFarlane doesn't hate me. He's thinking about the day when I'll be a captain and he'll be a major, and I'll have to salute him. It's good for them, that feeling."

"He hates you," Sandra persisted. "He won't believe a word you say."

He lit another cigarette. He was smiling now. He put on his cap, tilting it a little, his eyelids narrowed arrogantly.

"Want to gamble on it, Sandy? He may hate me. He may itch to hit me, but he'll believe me. Men don't lie to each other, often not about women. Think it over."

He closed the door without a sound as he went out.

Sandra Calvert sprang to her feet, her hands tightened into livid fists. "You—you..." She choked on her fury.

Why, when there were hundreds of posts all over the country, had Rod Mackey been sent to Ridley Field? She had chosen the place because it was a small city, not too well known, and the living was cheap. She had followed the air corps because for so long her life had been bound up with it, and when Win left she had stayed because she liked being with men with wings on their collars. She had seen Mackey around but had kept out of his way.

She picked up the telephone, gave a room number, stamping her foot impatiently. Her face was set and bitter, with hard lines around her mouth. But her voice cooed.

"Ricky, did I wake you up? Darling, I'm so sorry! But I have to see you in the morning. Early. Oh, no, much earlier than that. By nine, at least. Ricky, you mustn't fail me. It's so terribly important to us!"

Jill came back to Buzzard's Hill in the hospital, wearing black sling and a pathetic face, and lay on a couch on the screened porch all day, indifferent to everything that went on around her.

She could not read, because she couldn't manage a book with one hand.

"One-armed men do it," her grandfather told her. He went to town and returned with an elaborate contraption, a sort of book-deck with an elastic band to hold the pages of the book. But when he had arranged her favorite magazine on it and showed her how to turn the pages, Jill smiled at him wistfully and pretended to read, but an hour later Julia noted that no page had been turned.

She sat down in the big chair with a little, pitiful, collapsing movement. She looked small and undefended, she looked nave and helpless.

"What's the matter with me, Rod?" she asked. "Why are you so bitter against me? I'm not bad. I've never been bad. I've had a lot of heartbreak crowded into a few years. I was young when I married Win Calvert. He knew his way around in that wild set over there in the Islands. I didn't. I had to grope. I made mistakes. I did stupid things. I made Win furious, but I wasn't bad. Win was bad. He was rotten. You know that. I was only foolish. And then after they sent us home and I got back into a sane atmosphere again I saw how intolerable it had all been. I saw that I couldn't take any more and that I needed take any more. So I divorced Win, and he didn't care. I think he was glad. He was glad to be rid of me. Now I've met this McFarlane boy, and he's nice to me, I'm not harming him. There are women who could harm him, but when he's with me he's safe from them. You're threatening to call him in and tell him things about me. Can't you see how useless that would be?"

"I don't have to take orders from you. I'm not in your command."

"You'll take these orders, Sandy Calvert!" He was grim now, his eyes were blue ice. "I want you to let that boy alone."

Her mouth curled scornfully. "Did they assign you to be a nurse to that squadron out there?"

"Take it easy, Sandy. You show your age when you blare up like that. Very unbecoming, too, I'm not getting out till you promise to send that boy about his business and not to see him again."

that Bordine fellow before you married Win? Before you got that Mexican divorce? Were you a child bride? I think not."

Her eyes flashed viciously. "You cowardly snoop! Go ahead and peddle your tales if you think it will do any good. There are a few things I could tell about you, too."

"Nothing whatever that isn't known already," she said, coolly. "Nothing that could hurt me in the least, now."

"You'll tell Ricky McFarlane a lot of tales about me and see what happens! He won't believe you. He'll want to fight you, but he can't because you're twice as old as he is and you've got bars on your shoulders. He'll hate you. He told me he hated you."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday Services at 10:45 A. M. All are cordially invited to attend.

"Unreality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon that will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, April 6.

The Golden Text is: "Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit shall be hewn down, and cast into the fire" (Matthew 7:19).

The citations from the Bible include the following passages: "If the Preacher was king over Israel in Jerusalem. And I gave my people to know wisdom, and to know madness and folly: I perverted that this also is vexation of spirit. For in much wisdom is much grief: and in that increaseth knowledge increaseth sorrow" (Ecclesiastes 1:12, 17, 18).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following selections from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy.

"Materialistic knowledge is power, it is not wisdom. It is but a blind man who has sought out many pretensions, but he has not yet and that knowledge can give him from the dire effects of knowledge. The higher false knowledge builds on the basis of evidence obtained in the five corporeal sense, the more confounding and the more certain in the downfall of the structure" (Pages 196, 14 & 531: 12-22).

Easter is the greatest and oldest

or even than Christmas by some three centuries, it seems to have been kept from the beginning in honor of the glorious Resurrection of the Son of God. Because Christ was raised from the dead on the first day of the week." Christians keep the "first day" of every week. Every Sunday, therefore, is a Feast Day, a little Easter, and should be sanctified by feasting at the Table "for he is the very Paschal Lamb which was offered for us and hath taken away the sin of the world, who by his death hath destroyed death, and by his rising to life again hath restored to us eternal life."
